Jackson, Mississippi
Meeting Planner Guide

City with vision. City with energy. City with soul.
As the capital of Mississippi,

Jackson is a Southern city that will show you a world of possibilities.

From unique, authentic festivals to internationally renowned ballet.

Fascinating museums to smooth, sassy blues. It’s all here in a vibrant metropolis of over half a million warm, friendly people.

Better still, Jackson offers more than 300 restaurants, nearly 5,000 hotel rooms, and a charm that delights visitors again and again.

Of course, one visit is all it takes to discover why

Jackson is the city with soul.

Source: Richard Boyer and David Savageau, Places Rated Almanac (Your Guide to Finding the Best Places to Live in America).
The Mississippi state legislature wanted the seat of government moved out of the Natchez area and into a more central location. It commissioned three men to locate an ideal place for a town that could become the state capital. After surveying areas north and east of Jackson, Thomas Hinds, James Patton and William Lattimore found no desirable site in that vicinity (what is now southeast Madison County) and the group proceeded southwest along the Pearl River until they came to LeFleur’s Bluff. Their report to the General Assembly was that this location had “beautiful and healthful surroundings, good water, abundant timber, navigable waters, and nearness to the Natchez Trace.”

A legislative act dated November 28, 1821, authorized the location to be the permanent seat of government for the state and that it would be named Jackson, in honor of Major General Andrew Jackson who would later become the seventh president of the United States.

The building of a new state house had top priority and a $3,500 contract was awarded to build Mississippi’s first capitol, a two-story brick structure 40 feet by 30 feet. In December, 1822, eight senators and 22 state representatives attended the historic opening session in the house “erected exclusively for the purpose of legislation.”

Shortly after the adoption of the Constitution of 1832 that ensured Jackson would be the permanent capital, the Mississippi legislature authorized the construction of a new, and much larger, house of government. The construction of a capitol of such grandeur in a small town of less than 1,000 people, with dirt streets and boardwalks, represented the bold vision and bright hopes that Mississippians had for the future. Before construction was well underway, the economy crashed into one of the most severe depressions in American history.

The dream of a suitable state house was kept alive as funding was squeezed out of a virtually bankrupt treasury, but it was to be 1839 before the dream became a reality and a beautiful new building was completed.

This magnificent example of Greek Revival architecture remained the seat of state government until 1903. It lay dormant for several years, and then served as state offices until the late 1950s. Having survived several threats of destruction, the Old Capitol was lovingly restored and opened to the public as a state historical museum in 1961.

Damaged during Hurricane Katrina in 2005, the Old Capitol was restored to its former glory and reopened as a state house museum in 2009.

A third capitol building, referred to as the “New Capitol,” was completed in 1903. This magnificent structure, patterned after the National Capitol, is a major tourist attraction today, as well as the focus of Mississippi state government activities.

Two other buildings are worthy of note. The Governor’s Mansion, authorized in 1839 and completed in 1842, is the second oldest residence of its type in the nation and is listed in the National Register of Historic Places. Jackson’s City Hall, built in 1846 for less than $8,000, is still the working seat of municipal government after more than 140 years. The massively-columned three-story building and the gardens that surround it are two of the most photographed locations in the city.

Jackson’s growth in the 1800s was slow and sometimes painful. During the Civil War, the town was ravaged and burned three times by Union troops under the command of General William Tecumseh Sherman. Surprisingly, the City Hall was spared the torch. It was rumored that Sherman bypassed the building because it housed a Masonic Lodge and that the Union Leader was himself a Mason. More likely its use as a hospital was the reason the building was not burned.

Although less than 8,000 people lived in Jackson at the turn of the century, its population began accelerating rapidly after 1900, and it is now one of the dynamic growth cities of the Sunbelt. In 2006, the population had climbed to more than 175,000 and the metropolitan area rose to better than 500,000. It is a major distribution center with a prime location of equal distance between Memphis and New Orleans (north-south), and between Dallas and Atlanta (east-west). Government – representing city, county, state, and federal agencies – is the city’s largest employer.

As a major distribution center, efficient transportation facilities are a must. Major air carriers are located in the Jackson-Evers International Airport. The Canadian National/Illinois Central Railroad and the Kansas City Southern Railroad and scores of major truck lines provide freight service to all parts of the nation. Jackson boasts a regional shopping mall and several smaller, multi-store centers. Six hospitals, including the nationally renowned University of Mississippi Medical Center, provide diagnosis and treatment for nearly every possible physical and emotional ailment.

Every major religious faith is represented in the city, and there are more than 400 houses of worship scattered throughout the 105 square miles of community. An excellent public school system is an integral part of the city proper, as well as several private and parochial schools. Five colleges and three universities are located within 15 miles of the city’s center.

Thousands of acres of public parks, formal and informal gardens, a nationally famous zoo, neighborhood playgrounds, and baseball, football, tennis, and soccer fields provide recreational outlets for all Jackson citizens. Outdoor living is paramount and all types of activities are available. Jogging and bike routes, nature trails, tennis centers, public and private golf courses, swimming pools and health clubs abound. The 50-square-mile Ross Barnett Reservoir, 12 miles northeast of the city center, is a haven for skiers, fishermen, campers, swimmers, and boating enthusiasts.

Residents are extremely proud of their famed Southern hospitality and outstanding quality of life. Community support is strong for a symphony orchestra, ballet company, an opera company, numerous theater groups, and world-class performances presented by local arts organizations.

Every four years, Jackson hosts the official USA International Ballet Competition at beautiful Thalia Mara Hall. The Mississippi Arts District also includes the International Museum of Muslim Cultures, the Russell C. Davis Planetarium, and the Mississippi Museum of Art.

Gourmet dining and nightlife sparkle on the Jackson scene. Many cultures and ethnic groups provide the city with cuisine that is truly international. One can choose from many different styles including Greek, Caribbean, Continental, Italian, Chinese, Japanese, Mexican, or good old Southern style.

With a rich history, convenient transportation, thriving cultural community and international cuisine, Jackson provides entertainment and Southern hospitality only found in the City with Soul.

The Gallery building, originally built in the late 1860s as a stately private home, stands today as one of the oldest surviving historic structures in Jackson. As the Municipal Art Gallery, it has become a cultural focal point for hundreds of local artists. On the first Sunday of every month, the Gallery hosts an Open House and presents a new art exhibition. Come by for a closer look at history in all its vibrant colors.

Activity Ideas

If it’s good times you’re looking for, you’ll find them all right here in Jackson, the city with soul! Come spend a weekend with us at one of our festivals or a week exploring our city. Go shopping or antiquing. See sports, concerts, the rodeo, theater, ballet or symphony performances. Visit our beautiful historic sites and museums. And when the sun goes down, it’s good food and good times.

That’s Jackson.

The Arts
Art museums and galleries abound; craftsmen are prolific. From fall through spring, the city with soul offers ballet, opera, symphony and pops concerts, and professional local and touring talent. Catch live club music just about any time.

Country Living
Enjoy an old-fashioned breakfast, hot off a wood stove, in an authentic turn-of-the-century farmhouse; even a fish fry or barbecue tailored to your appetite with your favorite entertainment can all be arranged at the Mississippi Agriculture & Forestry Museum. Afterwards, take a tour of the museum, the 1920s town, and the forest study area.

Get the Capital City Blues
Take a self-guided tour of historic blues sites; eat the best soul food found in the South; get a private blues lesson; catch cool music at hot night spots; take in a local music festival.

History and More
Jackson and Central Mississippi are filled with fascinating historic sites. Let us customize a special tour for you.

Houseboat Cruise
Catered cruise dinners with entertainment can be arranged on board the houseboat, “Friendship II.”

Literary Jackson
Visit the Eudora Welty House and Garden and other sites significant in the life of one of Jackson’s favorite Pulitzer Prize winners. Drive by many other literary sites in the city. Browse a great local bookstore for Jackson authors and first editions.

The Help in Belhaven Neighborhood Driving Tour
Drive the streets of Jackson through the scenes of Skeeter, Aibileen, Miss Hilly, Elizabeth, Stuart, and more from Kathryn Stockett’s New York Times best-selling book The Help.

The Help in Jackson Driving Tour, Part II
Continue the tour of The Help through other areas of Jackson, including downtown, Fondren, and West Jackson.

Safari Party
Walk the “Boardwalk” at the African Rain Forest located within the 110 acres of the beautiful Jackson Zoo. For a lunch or evening event, plan a Safari Party that is a little on the “Wild Side,” including a behind-the-scenes tour. Picnic area and covered facilities are available.

Shopping
Shop ‘til you drop at one of many specialty malls and boutiques.

African-American Cultural Tour
Explore Mississippi’s African-American culture by touring historic sites throughout the area, including Jackson State University, Tougaloo College, the Historical Farish Street District, and the Smith Robertson Museum and Cultural Center, where artifacts are displayed depicting the African-American Culture.

Sporting Events
Ask us about tennis, football, baseball, golfing, softball, shooting, bowling, soccer, volleyball, basketball, and more!

The Convention Services Department will act as your liaison for all sports or tours in the area.
